

ROUTE

1. Kopenhagener Straße | Famous in the GDR through DEFA's hit film Solo Sunny and an epicenter shortly after the fall of the Wall for the new East Berlin bohemia. The street's courtyards look out on the Ringbahn. To this day a fairly original piece of Prenzlauer Berg | Kopenhagener Straße
2. Humboldt Umspannwerk | Unfortunately currently not open to the curious public, unless a private leaser has opened the doors. With some luck, you may catch a temporary fashion or art exhibition and use it as the perfect excuse to explore the massive brick complex from the inside. Built in 1926 by Berlin architect Hans Heinrich Müller | Kopenhagener Straße 58
3. Kohlenquelle | This modest cafe-bar across from the Spannwerk offers a quiet atmosphere for reading the newspaper or enjoying an afternoon beer. Formerly used for coal storage, as the name implies, it has certainly retained a pre-reunification charm | Kopenhagener Straße 16
4. Moritzhof | Looking for an alternative, nature-oriented urban activity? This children's farmyard in Mauerpark has its roots in the squatter scene directly following the fall of the Wall. This green strip where the Wall once stood impressively unites history, nature, and Berliner lifestyle | Schwedter Straße 90

5. Gleisdreieck und Ulbrichtkurve | From the long pedestrian bridge the spans the no-man's land, survey the impressive deserted landscape. In the middle of the city, and yet so distant from it all | Schwedter Steg

6. Café Hainz | Affordable little breakfast and lunch dishes in a cozy vintage atmosphere | Schivelbeiner Straße 7

SCHÖNHAUSER ALLEE WALK | The borders of Berlin

Most describe today's Prenzlauer Berg with one cliché after the next. An unbiased stroll through one neighborhood illustrates the upsides and downsides of the area's transformation from an alternative bastion to a well-heeled quarter.

THE PROJECT

www.ringbahn.com takes a new look at the past and present of Berlin's Ringbahn, shedding light on technical, architectural, and everyday aspects. For those in the know, but especially for those just getting on board!

www.ringbahn.com a project of the

